John Rajca

M.S. Biology,
Institute for Creation Research

John Rajca served as the museum curator for the Institute for Creation Research for 19 years. He has spoken to several thousand people a year (of all ages) through guided tours of the museum. He has hosted many interesting guests including the American Atheists Association, the American Humanists Society, university students and professors from various Southern California schools, and people who claimed they were from other planets. Presently he is working as an associate doing display construction on the ICR museum expansion and assisting the ICR scientists in their genetics research.

Mr. Rajca has been interviewed numerous times, most notably by CNN and PBS, appearing on the PBS special “In the Beginning” by Jeffery Balmer. He has been a frequent speaker and guest on ICR’s weekly radio program “Science, Scripture, and Salvation.”

Mr. Rajca lectures on various aspects of 6-day creation at area Christian schools, churches, and Bible studies, reaching the young and old alike.

Mr. Rajca earned a B.S. in biology in 1983 from Christian Heritage College. In 1994, he earned an M.S. degree in biology from the Institute for Creation Research. Mr. Rajca has also received his M.S. degree in Faith and Culture from Trinity International University, Santa Ana.

Mr. Rajca and his wife Johanna have a son named Peter and live in a small town on the outskirts of Los Angeles.
